

Grandparents

Most grandparents have free time
for their grandchildren
when retired and not yet tired.

Grandchildren are always cute,
bright and talented,
the most perfect in the world.

Most grandparents know too well
the time will pass fast
they can only try make it last.

Small grandchildren welcome them,
still want to play games.
Soon they will have their own aims.

Grandchildren will grow up tall
They will know it all Telling everybody how silly they are.

Grandparents remember times,
when as parents, they
taunted nature's greatest gift.

Parents' fears, ethics and values all Passed into their child's mind, kaleidoscope of their genes.

The strongest genes won. Should they be pleased that Darwin's Theory worked or despair?
